

THE MOBILE CAMPUS

In order to attract students and stay competitive, educational institutions must look to a wireless solution. Students expect the latest technology, high speed Internet access, and access from all areas of the college campus. In addition, educators must have access to the latest instructional and research information and tools from any area on campus.

With the growing use of laptops among students and teachers, seamless access is required from the classroom to lab, library to student center.

SECURED YET ACCESSIBLE

Security, privacy, and control of sensitive information are top challenges for educational institutions. In addition, restricted access to the Internet is also a priority. While availability of information is essential, there are locations and times where access needs to be limited. For example, restricting access to the Internet in a classroom may eliminate unnecessary distractions.

For educators, a wireless solution must provide comprehensive, secure, and manageable services. Distinctions must be made between staff, faculty, and student access without compromising security.

A well-planned and designed solution will take into account the security requirements as well as ensure the safety of the network and data.

ENHANCED LEARNING ENVIRONMENT

With a wireless solution, educational institutions can offer students, faculty, and staff seamless access to information – from anywhere on campus. There is instant access to information and records, library resources, databases, and schedules.

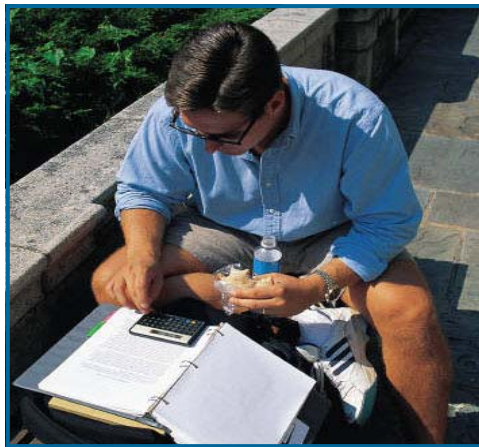

A wireless network is an essential tool to help make the most of limited resources and reduced budgets.
